ELKS ENTERTAIN HEAD OF ORDER

Grand Exalted Ruler Edward Leach is Banqueted by Portsmouth Lodge, B. P. O. E.

Portsmouth Lodge, No. 97 B. P. O. E., today had the distinguished honor of entertaining Grand Exalted Ruler Edward Leach of New York, head of the order. While Mr. Leach is no stranger to Portsmouth Elks, he having been here on several occasions before, the welcome was none the less hearty and fully in keeping with that usually shown by the members of old B7, who are noted for their hospitality.

Grand Exalted Ruler Leach accompanied by R. M. Davis of Somerville, vice president of the Massachusetts Elks, and Exalted Ruler John H. Cogswell of Lynn Lodge arrived on the 10.35 o'clock train from Portland. On their arrival they were met by President Ernest L. Chaney and Secretary Andrew O. Caswell of the New Hampshire Elks Association, the officers and Past Exalted Rulers of Portsmouth Lodge. Automobiles were in waiting and the guests were at once taken to the Elks' Home on Pleasant street where an informal reception was held. Owing to the fact that Grand Exalted Ruler Leach had been subjected to a very strenuous trip, the entertainment during his stay in this city, at his request was of a very quiet character.

He expressed to the members of Portsmouth Lodge his hearty appreciation of the improvements to their home and also the fact that they had retained as much as possible the Colonial appearance of their historic home.

At 1.15 Grand Exalted Ruler Leach and about 175 members of the Portsmouth Lodge sat down in the grill room and partook of an excellent chicken dinner with all the fixings prepared by Steward Henry Adams. When all had done ample justice to the good things and cigars were

GALLINGER HAS RIGHT IDEA

Says "Fast Day" Should Be Abolished and Patriots' Day Substituted

Senator J. H. Gallinger in a communication to the Concord Monitor has the following to say on Fast Day: "I have read with interest an editorial in the Boston Daily Advertiser of April 17th headed 'Now Hampshire's Fast Day,' in which it is stated that for the first time since the establishment of Fast Day in our state there was no religious observance of it at the State Capital. The Advertiser calls attention to the fact that some years ago Massachusetts dropped Fast Day and substituted Patriots' Day, and adds the suggestion that as 1904 day in New Hampshire has seemed to lose its religious significance and its spiritual force, we may well follow the example of Massachusetts. If it be true, as the Advertiser says, that 'The spirit of Fast Day is so far neglected in New Hampshire that agnosticism and respect suggest abolition of the day as an official holiday,' the proposition should receive the very careful consideration of our people. Personally it seems to me that the substitution of a day bearing the designation of Patriots' Day to be observed sometime during the month of May when the people could hold out door exercises of a patriotic nature in the various towns, would be much preferable to the observance of a day in April when the weather is very likely to be inclement, as it was this year. I make this suggestion for what it is worth, and trust that it may receive such consideration as its merits warrant."

ORDERED TO TAKE CUSTOM HOUSE AT VERA CRUZ

Admiral Fletcher Directed by Naval Authorities to Take This Step at Once.

Special to The Herald.
Washington, D. C., April 21—2 p. m.—The navy department has directed Rear Admiral Frank P. Fletcher, commander of the First Division of the Atlantic fleet to seize the custom house at Vera Cruz at once.

The senate convened this noon and the discussion was taken up relative to the eliminating the individual reference to Huerta throughout the measure, prescribed by President Wilson, and substituting the Mexican people.

CONGRESS STANDS BACK OF PRESIDENT

Authorizes Him to Use Armed Forces to Protect National Honor---No Additional News Received From Mexico---Army and Navy Moving Fast.

Washington, April 21—At 12.28 o'clock the senate recessed until 12 noon today, under an agreement to consider the resolution at that time.

Action by the army and navy of the United States to force Huerta to evacuate the flag was held up early today, through opposition in the senate to the form of the joint resolution approving President Wilson's purposes as it passed the house last night.

The President, while stating in his message to Congress that he had full constitutional authority to act in waiting for Congress to express its approval before ordering Tampico and Vera Cruz to be seized and other steps taken looking to reparation for the arrest of American bluejackets at Tampico.

ADAMAL BADGER PLANS TO LAND MARINES AT TAMPICO

On board the U. S. S. Arkansas at sea, by wireless via Key West, April 20—With the port of Tampico not far off and the knowledge that President Huerta has refused to accede to the demand of the United States government, Rear Admiral Badger, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, and the members of his staff were busy today preparing a tentative plan of campaign. They gave special attention to the details of a possible landing.

The crews of the battleships practiced with small arms and at sighting the guns. Aided by the favorable current and with a smooth sea, the officers of the warships expect to be within easy distance of Tampico early Wednesday.

TEACHER WILL RETIRE

Edwin P. Sherburne Has Taught School Nearly 50 Years

Edwin P. Sherburne, now headmaster of the Jefferson school at Roxbury, Mass., will retire from school work at the close of the spring term. He thereby brings to an end a career as school teacher which reaches back into the years by almost a half century.

Mr. Sherburne was born in this city nearly seventy years ago. After completing his schooling he taught in this city and then went to Manchester where he remained until in the middle of the '80s, where he went at Brookline, Mass., where he taught for six years. In 1890 he was appointed submaster of the Lowell school at Jamaica Plain, which position he held for six years, when he was transferred to the Martin school. Shortly afterward he was made master of the Lowell school where he remained until the fine new Jefferson grammar school on South Huntington avenue, was built. He was then offered the head mastership of the new school and accepted. That post he has occupied until today, residing in Dorchester a period of ten years.

After nearly fifty years in the business, Mr. Sherburne and his good wife plan to settle down upon a farm in New Hampshire. Dr. A. B. Sherburne of this city is a brother of Principal Sherburne.

Belman, of New Hampshire college will discuss the characteristics of each breed and the good and bad points of each individual. Nothing can be more interesting and educational to a dairyman.

FOR A GREATER PORTSMOUTH

Should Devise Ways and Means to Build a Bridge Across the Piscataqua River

The Brooklyn Bridge was commenced in 1870 and opened May 24, 1883, thirteen years in building was considered the world's greatest achievement in bridge construction, total length being 5537 feet; total width being 85 feet. Upwards of 500,000 people and 5,000 vehicles cross the bridge daily. Now there are four bridges from New York to Brooklyn in similarity to the Brooklyn bridge and the fifth bridge is two-thirds completed. All the bridges, but the Brooklyn bridge, make use of an island in the middle of East river in the construction of the bridges. This gives us a pointer, and suggests to us to use Badger's Island in constructing a bridge across our river—as the key to the problem of bridge building to Kittery—a bridge from the western end of Badger's Island to the eastern side of Noble's Island would be a narrow part of the river and above the shipping of our port, except that which goes up river. The Portsmouth Board of Trade and our citizens should devise ways and means to build a bridge across the Piscataqua river and the best kind of bridge. Let us begin now. We will never be a Greater Portsmouth until we build the bridge and thus will make a greater Kittery, greater Eliot and greater York. In fact greater Rockingham and York counties.

GEORGE B. FRENCH CO.

DONOVAN—McCONVILLE

Young Couple United in Marriage in Kittery This Morning.

A very pretty wedding occurred at Kittery this morning when Miss Elizabeth G. McConville became the wife of Daniel J. Donovan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dennis O'Brien of South Berwick. The bride wore a beautiful suit of blue French poplin silk crepe de chene waist, hat of cream straw with plume to match. She was attended by her sister, Miss Catherine McConville, who wore navy blue serge, waist and hat to match. The best man was John Joseph Laga.

Following the ceremony the wedding party and several guests came to this city where a wedding breakfast was served at the Sinclair Inn, consisting of chicken salad, cold ham, rolls, olives, celery, assorted cake, coffee, ice cream and fruit. The couple will enjoy a honeymoon in Boston, New York and Philadelphia and on their return will reside in Kittery.

They are both popular with a wide circle of friends, and the many beautiful and costly gifts received, is an attestation of their popularity.

DUFFY WINNER OF MARATHON

Fabre, Another Canadian, Takes Second Place--Hard Finish and Fine Race.

Jimmy Duffy of Hamilton, Ontario, won the great Boston A. A. Marathon Monday, crossing the line fifteen seconds ahead of Edward Fabre of Montreal, after one of the most thrilling races in all the history of the distance running.

The two Canadians displayed wonderful judgment and form all through the race, staying well in the rear in the first few miles and then gradually coming up on the leaders.

At the fifteenth mile mark they passed into the lead and from then on the race was simply a tight battle between the pair.

Coming into Coolidge corner the two men were fighting abreast and the crowd along the course was wild with enthusiasm. Till the Hutchinson street, at Beacon and Commonwealth avenue was reached the two stout-hearted Canadians fought a bitter, ding-dong battle.

Duffy Fought Him Off

Duffy, however, had the necessary stamina and was able to pull away from Fabre in the last few hundred yards. J. C. Carlson of Minneapolis was the third man to come up Baxter street, but he had not been checked off at the registering posts along the course, he was disqualified and the place was given to Joe Larkin, the Cambridge plegger who followed him in.

The winner's time was two hours, twenty-five minutes and one second. Fabre was fifteen seconds behind him. There was one of the greatest crowds in history at the finish, and the two Canadians were given a glorious reception after they had panted up Baxter street, and dragged their weary feet across the finish.

Both recovered quickly, however, and did not show many signs of strain a few minutes after the end.

W. Bell of Toronto, came home fourth, A. V. Roth, the little Roxbury runner, fifth, V. Keronen of Brooklyn, who led the field for fifteen miles, sixth, and George McInerney of Philadelphia seventh.

Fritz Carlson, last year's winner, was eighth; Tom Lilley of Roxbury, ninth; Festus Madden of Roxbury, tenth; H. Hodgman of the New York A. C. eleventh, and J. Anthony of New York, twelfth.

Kyronen Led Early

In the early part of the race Kyrone looked like a sure winner, as he took the lead, and with Joe Larkin at his shoulder stayed there for fifteen miles. The rush of the Canadians at this point was too much for him, however, and he began dropping back.

Larkin gamely kept plugging, and though passed several times, many managed to fight his way back into third place.

Another surprise was the great work of A. V. Roth of Roxbury. This youngster showed two weeks ago in the Cambridge road race that he was in great form, but few expected that he would be able to go over the long route.

He stayed up well, however, and at the finish was as fresh as any of the runners.

BURNS MADE EVERHARDT QUIT AFTER HARD MATCH

Cyclone Burns was awarded the match with Bob Everhardt at Everett's hall on Monday evening, after thirty-two minutes of rattling good wrestling. Both men appeared in the pink of condition, and both appeared to weigh about the same, and it was a grand battle, between two men who know the wrestling game from every angle and who wrestle with their head as well as strength.

Everhardt had a bad ear when he went on the mat, the result of a former match, and he favored it every chance he got. He finally landed it into a head scissor and the pain was so great for Everhardt that he quit, and shortly after announced that he would not go on again.

The match was fast and remarkably clean, as neither of the two men showed a sign of temper during the match. Everhardt took the battle to Burns. He is a powerful built man, and this great strength, along with his great knowledge of the wrestling game, made Burns hesitate to keep on at his wicked hold.

Early in the match it was seen that Everhardt had a badly swollen ear and it worried him. He finally landed into a head scissor and it was across the injured ear, and Everhardt awarded the fall to Burns as he was willing to come on for the remainder of the time. He said, however, he was suffering too much with his ear and he would throw the match.

A physician who dressed Everhardt, said it was very painful, and he used good judgment in giving in.

Dryden refereed the match and announced that he would wrestle Everhardt if his ear got well by Wednesday, on Thursday.

FAIR, COOL AND WARMER

Washington, April 20.—Forecast for south as northern Alabama is predicted for the beginning of the week by the Weather Bureau. The bulletin says:

The week will open with showers and lower temperatures in the Atlantic states and with generally fair and much colder weather in the Lake region and the great Central valleys, with freezing temperatures over the northern tier of states, and with fair as far down as the Texas Panhandle.

By Tuesday the cool weather will reach the middle Atlantic states and New England and fair weather will prevail for several days. The cool period will be short and the higher temperatures over the West will extend rapidly eastward after Monday in advance of a northeast disturbance, reaching the Atlantic states by the middle of the week. The Northwest disturbance will move eastward and southeastward, attended by showers over the northwest early in the week, reaching the Plains states and the central portion of the country by the middle of the week and probably New England and the middle Atlantic states a day or so later.

After the passage of the first north-west disturbance fair weather with moderate temperatures will prevail over the West until the end of the week, except in the North Pacific states and the Northwest, where another disturbance is due by Thursday or Friday, with consequent unsettled conditions and higher temperatures, that will probably extend not far to the eastward by the end of the week.

MAKING A HIT

Kitty Gordon, in "Pretty Mrs. Smith" at the Cort Theatre in Boston is providing one of the brightest, jolliest, and best entertainments of the season, and the star and the play have caught on in unmistakable manner. The puzze has taken enthusiastically to this comedy with music, for it is just the sort of thing that public fancy. It is filled with merriment and gaily, with wit and humor and it has engaging comic effect. "Pretty Mrs. Smith"

Noted English Student Athletes Here To Run at the U. of P. Games

Here are the famous athletes from Oxford University, England, who will compete at the Pennsylvania varsity relay meet in Philadelphia April 25. They are (1) G. S. Robertson, (2) D. N. Gausson, (3) G. M. Spradley and (4) Arnold N. S. Jackson, England's best mile runner.

is distinctly and emphatically for all who enjoy high class, lively comedy, and play whose fun is provided by ladies and gentlemen in amazing situations and roll counter-rols. The comedy is superior to the usual piece that is written wholly to amuse. There is more to it. The story is ingenious and interesting. As a play "Pretty Mrs. Smith" does not need music and dancing and the other features that add to its attractiveness. They help a bit, but the play would be a mighty good show without them, which proves that Oliver Morison, its author, knows what to put into a play to make it a howling, popular success. Miss Gordon is exquisite, while Charlotte Greenwood and Sidney Grant provide irresistible fun. Harrison Hunter, the husband who whips in the end and Ray Allen and Edward Martindale as the husbands who yield are admirable. So are James Gleason as the funny colored servant, and Lilian Tucker as the girl who causes a heap of jealousy. The singing is captivating and the pretty girls in handsome gowns are a joy to hear and see. All in all, "Pretty Mrs. Smith" is the sort of entertainment that keeps an audience in a way up state of glee and merriment. It is beyond any question one of the very best things that has been in Boston this season, and it has made a well deserved hit at the Cort Theatre. Its crowds are going to see Kitty Gordon in "Pretty Mrs. Smith" and their enjoyment of the play and the admirable acting is expressed in unmistakable fashion.

BACK OF PRESIDENT

Washington, April 21.—Congress early this morning passed a resolution backing up President Wilson in his stand on Mexico and authorizing him to use the armed forces of the army and navy to compel General Huerta to recognize the rights and dignity of the United States.

A joint session of Congress was held at three o'clock Wednesday afternoon, at which time the galleries and corridors were packed with people to hear President Wilson's special message to Congress. The President appeared in the House at three o'clock and at once proceeded to read his message. The message was brief, not over a thousand words, and it briefly outlined the conditions which led up to the demand of Admiral Mayo for a salute and the refusal of Huerta to order it, and in conclusion he said:

"I, therefore, come to ask your approval, that I should use the armed forces of the United States in such ways and to such an extent as may be necessary to obtain from General Huerta and his adherents, the fullest recognition of the rights and dignity of the United States."

The house immediately gave time to the committee on Foreign Affairs to get a resolution ready and this was passed at an evening session and with but twenty-seven dissenting votes. The resolution was referred to the Senate who met at 12.10 this morning in special session and after a short debate passed the resolution.

A bill appropriating $50,000,000 to be immediately available for the use of the President for purposes of a national defense was introduced in the senate and referred. It was similar to a bill passed sixteen years ago for the Spanish war.

No direct news came through from Mexico, and no disturbances of any kind have been reported.

Washington, April 20.—President Wilson told the Washington correspondents today not to get the impression that the United States was going to war with Mexico. He pointed out that under no circumstances would the United States fight the Mexican people, that it was their friend. Mr. Wilson said he was going to congress to tell of a special situation and to ask approval of plans to meet a special situation. He declared the issue was only one between the United States and a man who calls himself president of Mexico, but whom the United States had never recognized as entitled to that right.

The president said the intention of the United States was to help the people of Mexico and that he had gotten a feeling of uneasiness when he found the newspapers filled with enthusiasm for war. Mr. Wilson declared he did not want war but justice and that he did not consider such acts of reprisals as are planned acts of war but measures short of war, sustained by the Graytown precedent, for one. The president said that in reality he was going to congress on an occasion for which, strictly speaking, it was not necessary to obtain authority, but that it was his desire to have the full co-operation and thought and purpose of congress. Mr. Wilson said that the executive could take steps which would fall short of a declaration of war.

The president emphasized that he had not lost his patience with Mexico for to lose patience seemed to him an act of weakness on the part of a person strong enough to do as he ought, but that he felt such incidents as recent ones might go from bad to worse and eventually bring about a state of conflict.

The president added that he thought it was wisest in the interest of peace to cut off those repeated offenses at an early stage. Events of the day, the president indicated, such as a final acceptance from Huerta, might alter his plans and he added that even the course of action by the navy was dependent upon circumstances from hour to hour.

When the president was asked the direct question if the purpose of his action was to secure the elimination of Huerta, he replied that the Tampico incident did not involve that question. He replied that the United States merely wanted full recognition of its dignity and such a recognition as would constitute a guarantee that such incidents as the one at Tampico would not occur again.

The president announced that he had his message ready, that it was about a thousand words long and would take about ten minutes to read. He declined to give out copies of it in advance as has been the custom, saying he wanted to keep it under advisement to the last minute. He arranged however, to have copies given out at the capital simultaneously with his delivery.

The president revealed that foreign diplomats at Mexico City had been using their good offices with Huerta in an effort to induce him to accede, but that no representations had been made to this government in any way by other nations.

he is commissioned, "except in case of emergency or in time of war." In the present situation, however, that is to say, under virtually war conditions, the President is not hampered by the laws applying in time of peace and may select the best man available for the position. The attitude of the military committee of Congress in the last two years has served as a warning against any effort to strain a point of law in favor of keeping any officer too long in the general staff. But General Wood's abilities are so well recognized and his experience has been such as to make his appointment the very best possible.

MEXICANS WARNED BY HUERTA

Must Refrain from Any Demonstration or Overt Act Against Americans

Mexico City, April 20.—The Mexican capital reacted with intense interest today the next word from Washington in reply to the refusal of Provisional President Huerta to comply with the demand of the United States that the Stars and Stripes should be unconditionally saluted at Tampico. All the morning papers published the statement by the Mexican Foreign Minister, Senor Portillo Toles, outlining the reasons for the position Huerta had taken up. This statement was followed by Huerta's advice to Mexicans to refrain from demonstrations with the view of not embarrassing possible further negotiations.

Many American residents have made preparations to stay in the Mexican capital whatever the outcome of the present crisis unless they are positively ordered to leave by the Mexican authorities. They express the belief that they will not be harmed in any eventuality. Others are going to Vera Cruz or are making preparations to leave should such a step become necessary or advisable.

Grand total, 17,950 bluejackets, 3,970 marines, 835 officers.

Boston, April 20.—The three battleships, Virginia, Nebraska and Georgia at the Charlestown navy yard, will sail, it was today stated, early Friday for Mexican waters. The Georgia is in drydock now, but will be floated out, within a day or two.

The Rhode Island, too, after repairs at the yard, is being up for extensive repairs, which will occupy about two weeks unless rush work is necessary when she can be put in shape in five days.

The three battleships carry close to a thousand officers and men apiece, and 105 marines at the yard may be sent aboard them. If the changed situation Friday warrants it, fuel, stores and ammunition up to full capacity are aboard the big ships, and a few hours' work will suffice to put them in shape to sail.

The three ships have a total of 72 guns; and their crews have been drilled for a week in handling machine guns, landing practice and similar exercises.

London, April 20.—"War" is the keynote of all the editorial comment in the English newspapers today on the crisis between the United States and Mexico. They support the position taken by the United States press, but without exception, but assert that the American nation faces a tremendous task.

That the English correspondents in America are convinced that the defiance of President Huerta means actual hostilities is shown by an announcement in the Evening Standard that its representative had called the one word "war." Many columns are devoted to the situation by the newspapers which give minute details of the American government's warlike preparations. The Pall Mall Gazette says editorially:

"Once hostile measures are taken they are not likely to stop at the occupation of Tampico and Vera Cruz. Our sympathy with Americans does not blind us to the perils of the course which they seem about to commit themselves."

Compelled to Act.

The Westminster Gazette says: "It looks now as if nothing could prevent war between the United States and Mexico. Negotiations have broken down and the United States is now compelled to take action to uphold the honor and dignity of the nation. That is said to be the authority for which Wilson will ask Congress today. All indications point to the difficulty being granted."

"It would seem that war between the two countries is now inevitable," said the Globe. "Undoubtedly Huerta's actions are the counsel of desperation adopted in the hope that all nations will unite with him to repel the Gringo's attack. Many observers are of the opinion that his calculations may prove to be correct. In that case the United States have before them a gigantic task."

The Evening Standard comments as follows: "President Wilson has wearied of Huerta's defiance. Intervention will or should be halted with satisfaction by Europeans—by Englishmen most of all. We believe American intervention will be able to restore peace to the country now in the throes of its 300th revolution without proceeding to extremes."

"Mexico will not be Americanized. She cannot be. Climate and traditions are against it. Her independence will not be infringed upon, but we may expect to see Huerta persuaded and the land policed by a strong national army under American supervision. Then will come such prosperity as will stave off the 302nd revolution."

MUNICIPAL INVENTORY.

It would be well if a practice that is gradually extending among cities and towns were speedily to become more general. This may be called a getting together and taking account of stock, as it were. In other words it is a looking over of the industrial and other conditions in the home town, seeing where it stands and where improvements can be made that will add to the general welfare.

In some places expositions representing home industries have been held, and always with profit to the communities interesting themselves in these undertakings. Strange as it seems, the average citizen of the average town is poorly posted on the industrial affairs of the town in which he lives. He may be able to name the different industries and give a rough estimate of the number of men and women employed, but he knows next to nothing of the aggregate payrolls and the aggregate value of the goods produced in a year by the factories that are as familiar to his sight as the trees in his doorway.

Such men—and that means most men—are always surprised when anything is done to call their attention sharply to their immediate surroundings. And the surprise is in almost every case a pleasant one. They find when the facts are stated and the figures presented by those who have taken the pains to post themselves that their towns are more prosperous and flourishing than they had supposed. Growth of towns, when it is a healthy growth, is gradual. Five or ten years slip away practically unnoticed. A new industry springs up here, one is enlarged there. These developments are noticed at the time, then becoming a matter of course, and men go along about their business not realizing the steady advancement their towns are making. One small New England city was recently shown by state statistics to have increased the value of its manufactured products more than $1,000,000 in a year, and not half of the people could believe the statement.

Cities and towns that have not yet acquired the habit would do well to wake up and find out what is going on at home. It pays to take a municipal inventory once in a while.

Owing to the pressure of official business President Wilson will not be able to welcome the delegates to the D. A. R. congress, which is to convene in Washington next week. But he will have an able and tactful substitute in Vice President Marshall, and the welcome will lack nothing in cordiality and sincerity because it does not come from the head of the nation.

The news that two bandits who attempted to rob a train in the state of Washington were "done up" by the plucky passengers is calculated to strengthen the belief that the world is growing better. It is an agreeable variation from the stereotyped reports of incidents of that character.

The public wants all the rights of Lieutenant Becker vigorously maintained during his coming second trial on the charge of instigating murder, and they will be. It also wants its own rights and interests properly safeguarded, and will be quick to make note of the fact if they are not.

Travelers in some parts of the country are complaining of charges for "service" in dining cars. But until the charge exceeds 10 cents it can be amply met by withholding tips. And it would be a good thing if the charge were the means of bringing about that reform.

This is housecleaning time, and Governor Bleese of South Carolina is busy with the state penitentiary, which he proposes to have emptied by August 1. But in cleaning the penitentiary, he is mightily soiling his official wardrobe.

It is lucky for Alexander Berkman, who was at one time known as the husband of Emma Goldman, that when in public he calls New York policemen the "hirelings of a czar" he isn't living in the realm of a czar.

The rent on the building in London occupied by the American ambassador is to be raised. The song of prosperity in this country has evidently reached the ear of the British realty holder.

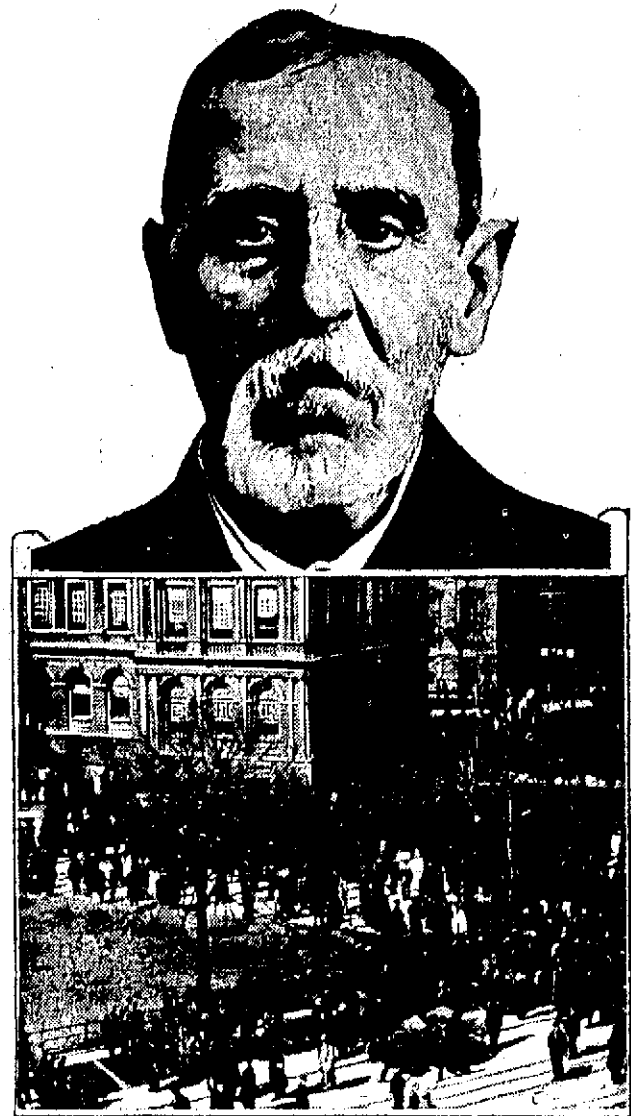

Nation-wide prohibition is being vigorously urged in Washington, but it won't come yet awhile. The country isn't ready for it, and it will be a long time before it is.

Up-to-date communities are already preparing to swat the fly, the crop of which is never ruined by hard winters, early springs and late frosts.

When it comes to weather, the present April stands pretty near the head of the class as a good mixer.

Just now Uncle Sam is the leading demonstrator of the world.

Old Man Who May Get 20 Years For Trying to Kill New York Mayor

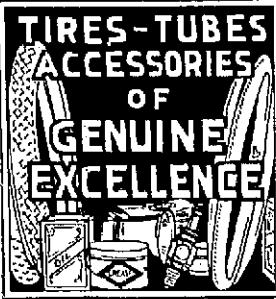

Photos by American Press Association.

The attempt to kill Mayor John Purroy Mitchell of New York city has caused a decided sensation, and District Attorney Whitman states that his assistant, Michael Mahoney, an unemployed man seventy years old, may get twenty years. Mahoney's bullet missed the mayor, who was seated in an automobile, and hit Corporation Counsel Frank L. Polk in the month, knocking out many of his teeth. The illustration shows Mahoney and the scene in City Hall park just after the shooting occurred.

MADE HER A POETESS

Celia Thaxter Gained This Accomplishment by Her Life at the Shoals.

The Boston Globe of today has two following references to Celia Thaxter, the gifted poetess:

"Celia Thaxter belonged to one of the old New England families that had been in this country for 200 years. Her father, Thomas B. Thaxter, was active in politics and editor of a paper.

When Celia was a child of 5 years Mr. Thaxter failed to get a public office that he fully expected to obtain and in bitterness over this defeat, he said he would no longer stay among his associates. He was able to get himself appointed lighthouse keeper on White Island, one of the Shoals group, and went there with his wife and family in 1843.

They were very happy in their isolation, which lasted for ten years. Then Mr. Thaxter bought the island called Appledore, where there lived a few hardy fishermen, and there he built a hotel for the accommodation of sportsmen and summer visitors. Celia Thaxter had developed into a charming young girl, full of vivid fancy and devoted to the people on the island.

Among the first visitors to come to Appledore was Levi Lincoln Thaxter, from Watertown, Mass. He was a scholar and a shy quiet man, who fell deeply in love with this girl of 16. He became her friend, won her affections and they were married. Three children were born to them while Celia was hardly more than a girl in years. Her sunny nature helped her through some trying periods of youth and inexperience and then she began to write and found a sweetness and satisfaction in pouring out the thoughts and memories that filled her mind.

A friend showed one of her poems to James Russell Lowell, who was then editor of the Atlantic Monthly, and he printed "Land Locked" in the magazine and Mrs. Thaxter knew nothing of the matter till she opened a copy of the Atlantic and saw it.

The poem was full of longing for the level line of solemn sea, but landlocked though she was she could joy in the beauty and fragrance of the flowers and the songs of the birds.

In the society of poets the fascination of brilliant society, with pictures to delight her eyes and music to appeal to her soul, Celia Thaxter found life very full and rich. But she could not forget her islands in the sea, and often went to the Shoals with her family.

When her husband died in 1864 she went back to Appledore and there made her home for the remainder of her life. She had a cottage near the hotel that two of her brothers conducted, and in the autumn she often went to Portsmouth, and she spent much of each winter in Boston.

Wherever Celia Thaxter chanced to be she was surrounded by the most famous of our American writers, for they found in her a kindred spirit. Her prose and poetry are exquisite in simplicity and delicate fancy. Her letters to friends give a fresh happy picture of life, in which small events become great ones through the spirit of the writer.

An old woman once amused Celia Thaxter by saying to her: "I have just been reading your book. How you must enjoy your mind!"

Writer's Prayer.

Help me to deal very honestly with words and with people, because they are both alive. Show me that, as in a river, so in writing, clearness is the best quality, and a little that is pure is worth more than much that is mixed. . . . Keep me from caring more for books than for folks, for art than for life.—Van Dyke.

Doubling Human Life.

In 1860 the public health conditions of New York were in so low a state that the average length of life of the inhabitants was 30 years. In 1912 these conditions had been improved so that the average length of life was 50 years. Thus the value of human life, reckoned in terms of time alone, had more than doubled in less than half a century.—Century Magazine.

CURRENT OPINION

Discrediting of Railroads Has Resulted in Lack of Confidence in Investments.

The railroads have created the facilities which represent part of your prosperity and are one of the developing influences in western civilization. Their property, their men and their officers are entitled to the same fair treatment that you extend to other respectable citizens and businesses of the city, county and state.

Why are there not more people in Nebraska, which is so sparsely settled? The platform has been occupied by our traders for the last ten years, until they have succeeded in discouraging investment in enterprises of our character.

The tremendous increase in taxes, with the regulations which are covered by numerous state and federal laws, all of which carry expense, and the discrediting of the sincerity of men in our profession, has resulted in a lack of confidence in which should be, aside from government bonds, one of the most acceptable investments in this country.—A. L. Mohler, President of the Union Pacific Railroad.

NATIONAL GUARD READY FOR DUTY

Between 1000 and 2000 Men Can Be Put Under Arms From This State.

Should war be declared against Mexico New Hampshire will be prepared to furnish its quota of troops, armed, equipped and ready for use at a day's notice. This is the statement made today by men high in military affairs of the state, and practically to a man, the members of the New Hampshire National Guard are on edge and anxiously awaiting the call to the front.

In event of war Manchester will furnish the largest number of troops from New Hampshire. Concord, Nashua and Keene will be called on heavily, and the remainder of the state's quota will be taken from the smaller communities scattered in various sections.

New Hampshire will be called upon to send between 1000 and 2000 men and these will take up practically the entire force of organized militia, now recruiting although probably the various organizations would increase rosters to place them upon a war footing. The state troops are commanded by Col. Harley B. Roby of Concord, Lt. Col. M. J. Healey of Manchester, Major William Sullivan of Nashua, Major Oscar P. Cole of Berlin and Major J. T. Sherburne of Manchester. If the call for troops is issued Manchester will send four companies of Infantry Battery A, field artillery regimental band and a portion of the hospital corps.

Concord will send two companies of Infantry and the remainder of the hospital corps.

Nashua will send two companies of Infantry.

Keene will send two companies of Infantry.

KITTERY

Breezy Items from the Village Across the River.

On Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Dunbar of Wentworth street a farewell surprise party was tendered the Rev. and Mrs. Armando Natio by the Phoebe organization of the Second Christian church. Nearly all the members of that society were present and the affair was so well managed by the committee in charge that it was a surprise in every way to the lately resigned pastor and his good wife. A "special meeting" had been called for at Mrs. Dunbar's home, but it so happened that Mrs. Natio had not heard of even that arrangement, so when in company with one of the members she called on Mrs. Dunbar on an "errand," she was completely surprised to find nearly the whole society there awaiting her. After greetings were exchanged another surprise was in store for her for at the ring of the doorbell the Rev. Mr. Natio was ushered in, having been secretly summoned from Boston for this occasion, and arriving about seven o'clock remained at the home of Mr. Charles Farwell until it was time to make his appearance at the gathering. A few moments after the Misses Ruth and Methyl appeared and the assemblage was complete and the evening's program was carried out. Music was beautifully rendered by the Mandolin club composed of the following ladies: Mrs. Charles Philbrick, piano; Mrs. Charles Rudolph, violin; Miss Mary B. Stafford, Miss Louise Newman and Mrs. Albert Brown, mandolins. Miss Charlotte M. Blackford sang two selections, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. W. T. Spilney, and a reading was given by Mrs. George Seawards. Next in order came more "surprises." Mrs. Fred M. Storey, in behalf of the Phoebe society, presented Mrs. Natio a charming dish outfit and two solid silver tablespoons, and Mrs. G. H. D. Lamoureux, president of the society, presented the Rev. Mr. Natio with a black leather traveling bag containing a case of toilet articles. Both were completely overcome for a moment, but fondly thanked the donors in well chosen words. A social hour then followed, and barbequed ice cream, assorted cakes and fancy crackers were served by the committee. Musical selections were then in order, these including a vocal trio, by Mrs. W. T. Spilney, Miss Charlotte M. Blackford and Mrs. Frank Locke, accompanied by the Mandolin club, a violin solo by Mrs. Rudolph, and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by all. At the time of Mr. Natio's taking charge of the Second Christian church, some two years ago, it was found that there was need of a young people's society, and as a result of his efforts the Phoebe society was organized, and during its existence it has done much toward the welfare of the church, and not a little of this has been made possible through the hard work of the pastor and his wife. As the hour of departure drew near, all wished them success in their new fields of labor.

PRESIDENT WILSON READS HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Not to War on Mexico But to Show Huerta That He Must Respect the U. S. Flag.

Washington, April 20. President Wilson today read the Mexican situation before congress today in these words: "Gentlemen of the Congress: It is my duty to call your attention to a situation which has arisen in our relations with Gen. Victoriano Huerta at Mexico City, which calls for action, and to ask your advice and cooperation in getting upon it. On the 9th of April a paymaster of the U. S. S. Dolphin landed at the Huasteca bridge landing at Tampico with a whaleboat and boat's crew, to take off certain supplies needed by his ship, and while engaged in loading the boat was arrested by an officer and squad of men of the army of General Huerta. Neither the paymaster nor any one of the boat's crew was armed. Two of the men were in the boat when the arrest took place and were obliged to leave it and submit to be taken into custody notwithstanding the fact that the boat carried both a gun and a crew of men of the United States. "The officer who made the arrest was proceeding up one of the streets of the town with his prisoners when met by an officer of higher authority, who ordered him to return to the landing and await orders, and within an hour and a half from the time of the arrest orders were received from the commander of the Huerta forces at Tampico for the release of the paymaster and his men. The release was followed by apologies from the commander and later by an expression of regret by General Huerta himself. "General Huerta stated that martial law he obtained at the time at Tampico that orders had been issued that no one should be allowed to land at the Huasteca bridge, and that our sailors had no right to land there. Our navy commanders at the port had not heard of no complaints from other governments of similar treatment. Subsequent explanations and formal apologies did not and could not alter the popular impression which it is possible it had been the object of the Huerta authorities to create, that the government of the United States was being singled out and might be singled out with impunity for slights and affronts in retaliation for its refusal to recognize the pretensions of General Huerta to be regarded as the constitutional provisional president of the republic of Mexico.

"The manifest danger of such a situation was that such offenses might grow from bad to worse until something happened of so gross and intolerable a sort as to lead directly and inevitably to armed conflict. It was necessary that the apologies of General Huerta and his representatives should go much further, that they should be such as to attract the attention of the whole population to their significance, and such as to impress upon General Huerta himself the necessity of seeing to it that no further occasion for explanations and professed regrets should arise. I therefore felt it my duty to sustain Admiral Mayo in the whole of his demand, and to insist that the flag of the United States should be saluted in such a way as to indicate a new spirit and attitude on the part of the Huertistas.

"Such a salute General Huerta has refused, and I have come to ask your approval and support in the course I now purpose to pursue.

"This government can earnestly hope, in no circumstances, be forced into war with the people of Mexico. Mexico is torn by civil strife. If we are to accept the tests of its own constitution it has no government. General Huerta has set his power up in the city of Mexico, such as it is, without right and by methods for which there can be no justification. Only part of the country is under his control. If armed conflict should unhappily come as a result of his attitude of personal resentment towards this government, we should be fighting only General Huerta and those who adhere to him and give him their support, and our object would be only to restore to the people of the distracted republic the opportunity to set up again their own laws and their own government.

"That I earnestly hope that war is not now in question, I believe that I speak for the American people when I say that we do not desire to control in any degree the affairs of our sister republic.

"Our feeling for the people of Mexico is one of deep and genuine friendship, and everything that we have a far done or refrained from doing has proceeded from our desire to help them, not to hinder or embarrass them. We would not wish even to exercise the good offices of friendship, without their welcome and consent. The people of Mexico are entitled to settle their own domestic affairs in their own way, and we sincerely desire to respect their right.

"The present situation need have none of the grave complications of interference if we deal with it promptly, firmly and wisely.

"No doubt I could do what is necessary in the circumstances to enforce respect for our government, without recourse to the congress, and yet not exceed by constitutional powers as president, but I do not wish to act in a matter possibly of so grave consequence except in close conference and cooperation with both the senate and house.

"I therefore came to ask your approval that I should use the armed forces of the United States in such ways and to such an extent as may be necessary to obtain from General Huerta and his adherents the fullest recognition of the rights and dignity of the United States, even amidst the depressing conditions now unhappily obtaining in Mexico.

"There can in what we do be no thought of aggression or of selfish aggrandizement. We seek to maintain the dignity and authority of the United States only because we wish always to keep our great influence unimpaired for the uses of liberty, both in the United States and wherever else it may be employed for the benefit of mankind."

SIR JAMES TURNER

By HAROLD CARTER.

Big Jim Turner had taken it into his mind to come into Balboa. There was nothing particularly admirable about that little East African coast settlement, which consisted of two dance halls, four gambling establishments, and nine saloons, besides the administrator's residence; but the mining camp in the interior did not possess any of those advantages. Besides, Big Jim had just shot and seriously wounded a thieving partner of his, and he had concluded that Balboa was the best place of temporary refuge.

He had counted the money in his pockets. He had four hundred and twelve pounds—nearly two thousand dollars. It had been his idea to spend that in a month of riotous living, at the end of which time, no doubt, his partner having recovered, there would be room for him at the mining camp again. But as he stood in the midst of the single street that Balboa possessed, and surveyed the scene rather unsteadily, a monstrous thought took birth in his brain.

Slowly he pulled a letter from his pocket and read the writing by the light of the lamp above Sheeley's saloon.

"My dear Sir James," it ran. "We herewith enclose you the sum of one hundred pounds, which, as we mentioned in our previous letter, was left you by your father, the late baronet. As you are aware, unfortunately Sir Edwin never relented in his attitude toward you, and, though the filio has come to you, the estates, which were not entailed, have passed to your younger brother. If we may take the liberty of saying so, there exists no reason why you should not return to England. While society, unfortunately, is not apt to relent toward a man who is a baronet without an income, we have assurance that the parties whom you have affronted are anxious that the affair which led you to expatriate yourself be forgotten.

"Kindly keep us advised as to your circumstances, so that, in case there should be a new heir, or in case of your unfortunate demise, we may be in a position to take measures accordingly."

The letter was signed by a firm of London attorneys.

Big Jim laughed rather hollowly and turned into Sheeley's. The place was packed with mining men and Saw That She Was Starting at Him.

Portuguese traders from the interior, and all were exuberant. The crowd had money to burn, for no poor man could have had business in that part of the coast on which Balboa was situated.

"What the—?" Big Jim began, staring behind the bar. Mechanically his hand went up to his head and came away with his hat in it, a circumstance which surprised him mightily. Behind the bar stood a fair-haired, ruddy-cheeked English girl, polishing glasses, and evidently looking with horror and dread upon the motley crew assembled in the saloon.

The barmaid was an institution all along the East African littoral, just as in the home country; but the type of woman who was to be found in these places was strikingly the reverse of the delicate, refined-looking girl who was serving at Sheeley's.

"Present me, Sheeley," muttered Big Jim with mock courtesy. But as his eyes continued to dwell on the girl's face he recoiled a pace or two and stared at her in dawning remembrance, and he saw the answering recognition in her own eyes.

"She's my new attendant," said Sheeley, grinning. "Got her through an advertisement in the London papers. I didn't tell you fellows—I wanted it to be a surprise. I guess she hasn't seen much of the trade and thought Balboa was a shade bigger and quieter than it is. She—"

"I didn't ask the lady's history. I want to know her name," growled Big Jim Turner.

"Now, Jim, don't get ugly and I'll tell you," answered the saloonkeeper, pushing a bottle toward him.

But Big Jim pushed it away with a sense of physical nausea. No need to ask further. He looked at the girl again and saw that she was staring at him still, and that the recognition was complete.

"I suppose you wasn't here when she arrived," said Sheeley. "That was two weeks ago. I thought I'd got a rare 'un when I caught sight of her pretty face, but she ain't no sport at all. I made a mistake, that's all."

Big Jim heard the words only vaguely. He had turned and stridden out of the saloon, and now, outside, he was seeing the past six years of his life in review before him.

Six years before James Turner, the eldest son of Sir Edwin, ninth baronet, and a rich landed proprietor, had been one of the most sought-after bachelors in England. He had just come home from the university; he was engaged to Lady Mary Hamilton, a charming girl, and the only daughter of his father's oldest friend, whose estates adjoined his own. James Turner had never loved Lady Mary; he had drifted into the engagement at his father's wish, and thought himself happy enough until Kitty Munroe appeared upon the scene. Kitty was a girl of good birth in reduced circumstances; she was Lady Mary's companion.

It was the old story of a love unhallowed by the sanction of church or law, or of society. When the discovery came about Sir Edwin was furious. He cut his son out of his will, except for a hundred pounds, "with which to go to the devil," as he tersely expressed himself. James Turner packed his belongings and started for Capetown. He worked his way up the coast, and there were few frontier settlements in that vast land that did not know him either by sight or else by reputation as a brawler and a no-gooder.

James Turner had "gone to the devil," indeed, but Kitty Munroe had been a mighty factor in that event. He had sought her everywhere before he sailed. But the girl, cast off and disowned, like himself, and not wishing to become a drag upon him, had hidden herself from prying eyes. No body knew what had become of her. She had not become submerged, but she had quietly effaced herself and set herself to earn her living as a waitress in a London restaurant. Bearing the indelible stigma of her shame, but carrying in her heart also the unforgotten memory of her love, she had lived in London alone until the lure of Sheeley's lying advertisement induced her to venture in Balboa, which she imagined to be a flourishing and settled town. Her two weeks there had been a terrible nightmare. But there was no refuge for her until she had worked out the passage money.

A year after Jim's departure Lady Mary had married his younger brother, and she now held rule over the estates which should have been Jim's.

Big Jim stood outside, remembering mournfully the past. What an ass he had made of himself! And now the girl he had sought so long had stood face to face with him once more, and they had looked into each other's eyes again with shame and terror, and yet not unforgetful of those days of passion and self-sacrifice so long ago.

A hideous tumult in the saloon behind him recalled Big Jim to his surroundings. A woman's scream rang out. He turned and hurried back. As he entered the door he perceived one of the Portuguese traders standing with one arm round the waist of the struggling girl, while with his free hand he flourished an ugly-looking revolver and defied every Englishman in the place to take her from him.

Jim strode up to the man and struck him in the face, knocking the revolver to the floor. Dominguez fell forward, half stunned, but the trigger of the falling weapon struck the corner of the counter and exploded the charge. Big Jim felt a stinging sensation in his shoulder. Next moment, with a wild cry, in which were contained all the hatreds and all the despair of the past years, he had leaped forward into the group of threatening Portuguese, knocking their knives aside and dealing mighty blows with his big fists. A general melee arose immediately. Lamps were overturned, and the struggling mob, inflamed with drink, fought and hacked at each other in the darkness until a smolder of smoke and the flicker of flames announced the end of Sheeley's.

It was pitch dark, save where the lurid rays of the burning building cast a glow upon the demon-like forms that fought and battled. All the evil elements in Balboa seemed to have rushed to plunder and destroy. Half-castes, with swarthy, abominable faces, crept in among the struggling men, reaching out for bottles of wine and dealing stealthy blows. Big Jim was in the thick of it, but he no longer knew friend from foe. He was bleeding from three knife wounds, he was stunned and reeling back against a door, and they were leaping at him like hounds at a noble stag. Suddenly the door opened behind him. A soft hand reached out and groped for his. Jim plunged forward blindly into the darkness, and the door slammed to behind him.

The girl's hand was in his. "Come this way!" she was whispering. She led him through a narrow passage, along a path among a maze of out-buildings, until at last they found themselves in the darkness under the palms, with the scrub brush of the impenetrable forests not fifty feet away and the flashing sea near by. There they stopped. He could just see her face in the starlight.

"Jim!" she whispered.

"Kitty!" he answered hoarsely. "What is it to be?"

"I don't know," she cried passionately. "Let me go, Jim."

"Back there?" he exclaimed. "Kitty—Kitty, you are mine now. Our lives must never part again. Wherever we go, you are mine always."

Their lips met in the darkness; he drew her into his arms a moment, and then, together, they plunged into the mighty forest.

WILBUR THEATRE

Elevated to the dignity of a star not by the violation of an ambitious manager, but by virtue of her brilliant histrionic achievement as La Cavallini, the heroine of romance, Doris Keane has taken rank with the foremost dramatic stars with the full approval of such important centres as New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, where her art has stood the test of the severest critical analysis.

A prologue and an epilogue representing the present, and three intervening acts representing events of forty years ago, constitute the play, in the prologue a ripe old bishop, protesting his grandson's intentions of marrying an actress, is told by that youth, that being a bishop, he cannot understand. And the bishop begins a story, and as he tells it the picture melts away, and the story he relates is acted, the bishop himself coming in it a young clergyman of 28. The environment is old New York.

Coming one night to the home of his leading parishioner, the young rector, meets the famous stage actress, notorious mistress of the bishop, she sweeps him off his feet, and for two months he is in the throes of love, until one afternoon he learns something of her relations with other men. This discovery crushes them both, and she goes to the Academy of Music to star her farewell to America, he sinks stunned and sobbing in the floor. That night, he goes to her hotel to see her, and save her soul, he tells her, but almost loses his own. And in this scene the artist in Cavallini leaves her and there remains only a shuddering, sorrowing helpless woman. The minister glances into his census clerk's hat, he feels, starkly, brooding forgiveness, and as he rises she stands with hands uplifted in prayer, and never turns her gaze when the man she has ever loved moves from the room. Then the epilogue, when the bishop finishing his story, fully told, for the grandson, is ill for marrying, and the benign old man is ready with his blessing. During the Doris Keane engagement at the Wilbur, there will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday of each week.

LITERARY NOTES

Movies a Civilization.—By H. H. Windsor, in the May Number of Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Five years of moving pictures among the tough districts of New York's East Side has produced a very marked improvement. This is vouchsafed by Frederick C. Howe, director of the People's Institute. Doubtless the most cosmopolitan platform in country, and who also is chairman of the National Board of Censors who pass on the new films. All the best film producers voluntarily submit their new films to this board for approval before allowing them to go out to the public.

The movies have brought the world to the East Side—the great world of snow-capped mountains, sparkling brooks, great trees and beautiful flowers. It may be hot and stifling in the small crowded room next the flat roof, but even the poorest may occasionally spare five cents for an hour in which mountain and lake are brought to those who have never been to either. So too, the world of art from every land, notable buildings, mighty steamships and other great feats of engineering; statues of the world's great men; even the notable events of their lives in which self-sacrifice and lofty ideals are reproduced, are seen and unemotionally absorbed. The duldest cannot fail to be aroused to some small stimulation of ambition or renewed effort at the swift, graphic story of what high-minded men and women have accomplished. And through this all runs the golden thread of better things and better life, which inevitably elevates and broadens; for in every life however narrow, there is some chord which must respond, be it ever so slightly, when the right key is touched.

Of all the inventions of our age, and no other—the cinema cannot comprehend it; nor music—the deaf can hear it; the moving picture today doubtless possesses and can exert the largest, strongest, quickest influence. With many acknowledged defects the influence is unquestionably one of good.

Corns Go Sure Pop, If You Use "Gets-It"

Simple As A B C. It's the New Way of Curing Corns and Calluses.

If you have corns now, the chances are you have never used "GETS-IT," the oldest seller among corn cures ever known. It is the new way, does away with all trouble, pain and fussing.

It's the Corns Off Your Feet, and the Corns Winkles Off Your Face. Nothing Can Do It Like "GETS-IT" in treating corns. Thousands who have pattered with old corns for years, have gotten rid of them right off, with a few drops of "GETS-IT," applied as quick as you can snap your fingers. Corns just have to be cut, picked, filed, gouged and pulled. Quit it. You've tried cotton rings that cause shooting corn pains, greasy salves that spread over the toe and make it raw and tight that sticks to the stocking—now try "GETS-IT." It has none of the drawbacks of the old style corn cures, cures pain and never fails on any corn or callus.

"GETS-IT" is sold by all druggists, 25c a bottle, or sent direct, by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

an aviator and a flock of great eagles, who recent the intrusion of this bird-man who comes circling about their mountain home. Ever since man began to fly the probable outcome of a battle of this sort has been a fearful speculation among students of aeronautics. Mr. Roberts has written a thrilling and real-scene story of this subject. A one-act play by Arthur Wing Pinero, "The Widow of Walsdale Head," is a feature of this issue. This is a delightful reading play, but a departure from Pinero's best known line of work. "The House in Demetrius Road," a two-part story by J. D. Beresford, is concluded in this number, and (1914) Macdonald Hastings tells more of the doings of "The Tribes" (the family of extraordinary children that were introduced to Smart Set readers in April).

"Person-Made" is an extravagant satire by Freeman Tilden on certain aspects of "Forty Pounds of Gold," by George Catton, is a thriller, a story of Alaskan prospectors. Another thriller is "A Medal" by Louis Livingston, which concerns an automobile wreck and its even worse sequel. Evelyn Gill Kluge's "Come Man to Every Family" is a good story of the doings of old-fashioned neighbors, and "In the Case of Bradner" Hugh Irish tells how a man battles with and masters the demon of fear. A spry poem of a very unusual sort is "Das de Truis" by Hesterman and Mary Perry King. Another poem of distinction is Joyce Kilmer's "Dedication," which features of this number are, "In a Century" a story of a Russian massacre, by Thom Byner; "The Joke Town of America," an attempt to give Osh-Kosh, Kalamazoo, Yonkers, and other strange-named places, their due, by George Jayme; "Hamlet and the American Stage," a theatrical indictment by George Jean Nathan; and poems by George Sterling, Richard Le Gallienne, Ludwig Lewisohn, Robert Loveman, Blanche Shteamaker, Wagstaff, Louis Untermeyer, Paul Baldwin and Skipwith Cannell. This issue of the Smart Set is marked by interest and vivacity, and in general interest and variety has not been surpassed by any previous number in the series.

Fashion's Forecast
By Angelica Schuyler

The most important change in fashion which the present season, as brought us by the change in the silhouette of figure lines. This has been most marked despite the efforts of many of us to disguise the fact. The change has been brought about by the use of ruffles, bangles, and bustle forms, all used with the object of producing a hip extension. The large waists, the drooping shoulders and the narrowness around the ankles have been retained.

The use of the extended hip has affected all garments, even outer ones. We see the flare over the hips in all the new coats of any length and rate is necessary if they are to be worn over the new-style dresses. In the more extreme styles we find these coats cut in two sections, the lower taking the form of a golden blouse.

Other extreme coats are very loose, finished at the bottom with several flounces, says The Mother's Magazine, but these extreme features are all modified in the suit for general use.

Even the comfort coat is now cut considerably shorter than it formerly was. Those which came out in the early spring season reached in many cases to the knee, but the newer garments come just below the waistline. The English top coat which first appeared last season is again prominent but it is much wider in the skirts. To give the sport coat an air of novelty we have to depend upon materials and upon a very slight extension of the skirts.

A great feature is made of coat collars, most of which are in the kimono shape, or in the new collar fly form, rolling away from the neck. In many instances the pointed hood collar is used.

May Century News Notes

There is no game that creates more technical discussion than the game of golf. New ideas based on long experience and study are behind the theories expressed in "The Soul of Golf," an article to be published in the May Century Magazine by P. A. Vailie, author of "Modern Golf."

Strange Tragedy of Remorse

A beautiful and mysterious Russian lady of tragic mien and garbed in deepest mourning made a pilgrimage of penitence to the grave of a well-known New Yorker who died for love of her. A remarkable romance that proves that truth is far more strange than fiction will be one of a score of fascinating articles to be published in the 24-page illustrated Magazine of next Sunday's New York World. An added feature of the Sunday World of May 3 will be a separate 8-page Fashion Supplement, edited by May Mantou.

His Commitment

"They say that women keep the wheels of commerce going." "Maybe so. Here's a woman's program when she buys anything: She opens a handbag, takes out a purse, opens the purse and takes out a coin, shuts the purse and opens the handbag, shuts the handbag and adjusts her veil. I think business would slump if a man had to do all that every time he made a five-cent purchase."

First Impressions.

Ex-Senator Charles had just bought at the Apollon sale in New York a wonderful Japanese rug for $2,000. To a reporter who declared that he saw nothing remarkable in the faded antique rugs and carpets spread about him, Mr. Clarke said:

"You are not yet familiar with this subject. It is so with porcelains, with fables, with enamels—one's opinions and criticisms at first are rather absurd."

"It is like the young woman's first view of the sea. She was servant, she had never seen the sea before, and her mistress, nodding toward the great, wind-swept expanse of ocean with its gulls and flying clouds and distant sails, said:

"There, Mary, is the sea. What do you think of it?"

"Oh, mum, she cried, 'it smells just like oysters.'"

What appeared to be a suffragette bomb was recently discovered on a stand at the International Cinematograph exhibition at Glasgow.

Attracted by a persistent ticking, an exhibitor went to the stand and discovered there a small square parcel, on which was written "Votes for Women."

He dropped the packet into a pail of water, but when it was afterwards opened it proved to be nothing more than the inside of a cheap clock and pieces of paper, on which were written various suffragette cries.

TOOK "KIM" FROM REAL LIFE

Original of Famous Character Kipling, Wrote of Traced by an Editor of India.

What a pity that Kipling does not describe more scenes that he has witnessed! He could have described scenes of Indian life that continually passed under his notice. He might have entered the massive palaces of pompous rajahs and the humble homes of the poverty-stricken peasants and told us in his wonderful language what he saw there. Instead he has spoken indifferently of what he heard. Kipling had such wonderful opportunities!

For instance, take the story of Kim. The character of Kim has been treated in a similar way to that of Huckleberry. According to Mr. Lord, the editor of a Darjeeling newspaper, the Pall Mall, Kim is no other than Tint Doolan, Jr. Shortly after the so-called Indian mutiny of 1857 a company of British soldiers were garrisoned on the dreary, sunless heights of Sonohall, a peak of the Himalayas, not far from Darjeeling. There the sun shined on an average of three days a year, and there a romantic Irish sergeant fell in love with a beautiful Tibetan girl.

The sergeant's name was Tim Doolan. He eloped with the Tibetan beauty and crossed the border to live with her people on the borderland. Nothing more was heard of Sergeant Doolan for another 20 years, when his son, Tim Doolan, Jr., was arrested in the market place of Darjeeling for murder. Young Doolan was very fair in complexion, with blue Irish eyes and red hair, although he spoke only Tibetan. The British authorities looked him over ungraciously and wondered at the Irish type and Irish name. Later, papers belonging to Tim Doolan, the sergeant, establishing the origin and identity of the son, were found on the accused who, like Kim, valued the papers as a charm. The sergeant's rifle and side-arms were also found afterward in Doolan's hut. The half-caste son was executed for murder. The story is well known all over India, and from such frail material Kipling created Kim.

But Kipling is not an authority on India, or other things Indian. He is only a writer of the life of foreigners in India—not of Indian life.—A. R. Sarath-Roy, in North American Review.

Prospecting on Private Estates.

The question of inducing prospecting upon privately owned estates is also one of prime importance. The laws of many countries, holding that mining is an industry of prime importance, have been published, give to the would-be prospector the statutory right under certain conditions and limitations to prospect beneath the surface of private property. The owner is protected in various ways, and shares in any profits which may accrue from such development work, but he is not able to prevent it. He must either mine the ground himself or permit the applicant to do so; he cannot put the bar on a 10,000-acre ranch and say to the world, "There are mines here, but I forbid anyone to exploit them, neither shall I work them myself." Large tracts of promising mining land are thus withheld from exploitation in this country today, and rich ores are waiting the arrival of the Columbus who shall disclose their existence to the world. The laws of the future must some time make provision for the exploration of all such lands, and it is not too soon to give the subject serious consideration.—Engineering Magazine.

MUST WAIT SIX MONTHS

Prospective Bride of Marine Sentenced to House of Correction at Dover.

Stella Cormier will not be at liberty to marry Rudolph W. Winkler, a marine stationed at the Portsmouth navy yard, for more than six months, at least, because of objection made by Judge Frost in the Dover district court on Monday and rendered effective by his judgment. Although Winkler was present in court, exhibited a marriage certificate and declared he would marry the girl.

The girl was before the court Saturday, charged with being a common street walker. At that session the judge was informed that Winkler and the respondent had filed marriage intentions with City Clerk Quinby several days before. The case was accordingly continued until Monday that Winkler might appear and make known his sentiments in the matter.

When Winkler stated that, notwithstanding the charge against the girl, he was ready to marry her, Judge Frost declared he would not consent to the marriage as he believed he would be doing a "great wrong." He then ordered the case to be heard. Patrolmen Murray and Crowley testified that they had seen the respondent on the street with different marines at all hours of the night, and Crowley had once before taken her to the station.

The court found the respondent guilty and sentenced her to six months at the Strafford County House of Correction with costs of $6.93.

Will Do Better Next Time

The marine guard baseball team which met its first defeat by the Portsmouth high school on Monday are still in the game regardless of the way the school boys clipped it to them on the local diamond.

The game of Monday was a feeder for the make-up of the regular team and it is likely that some new faces will be seen among Uncle Sam's nine the next time they appear in the national game.

LAI D AT REST.

Funeral Services of the Late John Holland Largely Attended This Morning

The respect in which the late John Holland has been held during the years of his long residence in this city, was manifested this morning when people in all walks of life gathered at the Church of the Immaculate Conception to pay the last earthly tribute which the living can render the dead. The large concourse of friends and acquaintances were moved by a common grief for the loss of a man they knew and loved so well in life, not alone for the close friendship they enjoyed with him, but for the many good deeds of charity performed with no ostentation since his boyhood.

A high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Edward J. Walsh, P. R., who also conducted the funeral service at the conclusion of the mass. The musical portion of the service was rendered by a quartette from the senior choir with appropriate solos by Miss Katherine O'Leary and P. E. Kane. The floral tributes most beautiful and largest in number, spelled in language more full than words could convey the loss sustained in the parting of such a good man.

The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery under the direction of Undertaker W. P. Miskell. The pallbearers were Norman H. Beane, Thos. Mullen, Sherman T. Newton, John H. Dowd, Charles P. Carroll, Michael Hurley, William Vasey and John Sullivan. A large delegation from the Elks, Knights of Columbus and Ancient Order of Hibernians attended in a body and the first named order conducted services at the grave.
